 CREATES A CHILD STAR AT THE SUPER BOWL

The Eagles soar! From top: Winning quarterback Nick Foles and infant daughter Lily (in pink headphones) celebrate the team's historic win; actor Bradley Cooper and wife Irina Shayk whoop it up; Justin Timberlake's Stella McCartney outfit channels his new Man of the Woods album; Dax Shepard strikes a pose with Eagles cheerleaders.

What an electrifying night! From flu-ridden Pink's powerful rendition of the national anthem and Justin Timberlake's electrifying halftime show to the incredible runs, tackles and knockouts, Super Bowl LII, at Minneapolis's U.S. Bank Stadium, was an action-packed thriller.

Whether cheering on the Philadelphia Eagles or the hotly favoured New England Patriots, the A-listers on hand couldn't hold back their enthusiasm, with stars like Jennifer Lopez, Bradley Cooper and Jimmy Fallon all caught up in the merriment.

Justin, who released his new Man of the Woods album two days earlier, clearly relished his return to the halftime spotlight; the last time was with Janet Jackson in 2004 (the year of the infamous "wardrobe malfunction").

Dressed in a Stella McCartney camouflage suit and deer-emblazoned shirt and backed by dozens of dancers, the "Can't Stop the Feeling" singer delighted with a medley of old and new hits and even sat down at the piano for an intriguing "duet" with late singer Prince, who was projected on video.

At one point, Justin bolted into the stands and snapped a selfie with a thrilled young fan. "My phone just exploded!" said Ryan McKenna, 13, who acquired 8,000 new followers on social media overnight.

Watched by 67,000 fans, the Eagles beat the Patriots by 41-33 to earn their first Super Bowl title – prompting supermodel Gisele Bündchen to comfort her husband, losing quarterback Tom Brady, with these sweet words, "To my love, we are incredibly proud of you because we are able to see every day all the commitment, sacrifice and hard work that you have devoted to become the best in what you do."
