

WITH HER FAMILY BY HER SIDE
VICTORIA BECKHAM
 CELEBRATES A DECADE IN NEW YORK AND DOWNPLAYS SPICE GIRLS REUNION

With her proud family cheering her on from the front row, designer Victoria Beckham debuted her upcoming collection at an intimate weekend show that capped off her decade-long affair with New York City.

Victoria, who will join London Fashion Week for the first time in September, was clearly excited to have husband David, 42, and three of her children – Romeo, 15, Cruz, 12, and Harper, 6 – there to support her as she unveiled her Fall/Winter 2018 line of dresses and coats, male-inspired shoes and oversized totes. The intimate crowd was dazzled by the prints and military hues, leather and faux fur and belted waists and bold shoulders meant to “embrace the contours of the female form, echoing the design aesthetic that I originally started with.”

Although their eldest son, Brooklyn, 18, was in L.A. celebrating girlfriend Chloë Grace Moretz’s 21st birthday, he wasn’t far from his parents’ hearts. “Show day ... Proud of mummy. We miss you @brooklynbeckham,” posted David with a photo of him and his three youngest.

Unlike her former shows held in a large office building in Manhattan’s financial district, Victoria, 43, chose a smaller upper east side mansion so guests could get closer to the fabric and detail. “I wanted this to be a nice thing to do on a Sunday morning,” she explained. “I want people to enjoy coming to my shows.”

The cozier, salon-style spot was also reminiscent of the appointments she held as a rising fashion star when she first arrived in the Big Apple.

“I’m nervous because I’ve never shown in London,” mused Victoria about debuting in her native England, where she rose to fame as the Spice Girls’ Posh Spice. It doesn’t mean she’s also returning to the stage as a singer, she insists.

“I’m not going on tour. The girls aren’t going on tour,” she told Vogue while promoting the New York Fashion Week show. “It was really, really, really lovely... But this [fashion design] is what I do now.”

Harper, 6, is winter chic as she takes a spin on the rink in Central Park. The youngest Beckham and only daughter channels her mom’s all-black working ensemble as her protective big brothers guide her along. ‘Love u baby girl,’ Victoria captioned a photo showing her cuddling the gap-toothed darling.

The Beckhams (right and top right) – Cruz (L), Harper, Romeo and their dad, David – sit in the front-row to support Victoria’s salon-style show at New York Fashion Week, marking 10 years since the former Spice Girl debuted her first line in the Big Apple.
