

AS HER HUSBAND STAYS HOME TO NURSE AN INJURY
THE QUEEN
 LEADS EASTER SERVICES WITH HER STYLISH
 FAMILY BY HER SIDE

Looking fabulous in fuchsia, the Queen, 91, smiles enthusiastically as she greets well-wishers outside of St. George's Chapel on Easter Sunday. Earlier in the week, she recognized 91 senior citizens for outstanding service as part of Maundy Thursday celebrations.

Despite some conspicuous absences, this year's Easter holiday proved to be a colourful affair for the Queen and her devoted clan.

It was a sunny Easter Sunday as members of the Royal Family gathered at Windsor Castle and then made the short walk to St. George's Chapel for the Easter matins service.

Dressed in their festive best, the close-knit royals were coordinated in spring shades of white and blue. Leading the procession was Princess Anne, who wore a side-buttoned teal coat and matching fedora, and her husband, Vice Admiral Sir Timothy Laurence. They were joined by the Princess Royal's children, Peter Phillips and his Canadian wife, Autumn, as well as pregnant Zara Tindall, who was radiant in a head-to-toe blue ensemble.

Anne was joined by her brothers Prince Andrew and Prince Edward, the latter accompanied by Sophie, Countess of Wessex, and their children Lady Louise Windsor – who, at 14, has grown as tall as her mom! – and James, Viscount Severn, 10.

FIRST TIME IN PUBLIC

Stylish sisters Princess Beatrice – ever-glamorous in a white coat and hat – and bride-to-be Princess Eugenie made a splendid pair. Unlike the other women in the family who opted for spring coats, on-trend Eugenie chose a playful Oscar de la Renta paint-splattered buttoned black dress and a fuchsia hat. By her side was her fiancé, Jack Brooksbank, in what was their first public appearance since announcing their engagement in January.

Once at the castle, the supportive family chatted amiably outside while awaiting the Queen's arrival. As the 91-year-old monarch stepped out of her car, looking fabulous in fuchsia, they bowed and curtsied and then followed her into

It was a fun family reunion for (L to R) Peter and Autumn Phillips, Zara Tindall, Jack Brooksbank and fiancée Princess Eugenie, Princess Anne, Princess Beatrice and Anne's husband Timothy Laurence. Below: Prince William and Kate also made an unexpected appearance.

At nine months pregnant, the Duchess of Cambridge was the day's best surprise the chapel – the same place that Prince Harry and fiancée Meghan Markle will marry next month and where Eugenie and Jack will wed in October.

Unfortunately, her 96-year-old husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, was at home recovering from a recent hip injury and couldn't attend the service.

Still, onlookers were delighted by the unusual late arrival of the Duke of Cambridge and a ▶

Noticeably absent from the family gathering were Prince Harry and Meghan Markle as well as the Duke of Edinburgh

Kate has gained worldwide attention for her maternity style (see page 24). She was last seen wearing this Catherine Walker coat and Lock & Co. hat on St. Patrick's Day 2015, not long before giving birth to Princess Charlotte.

According to her excited husband, Kate is due with their third child 'any minute' surprise guest: his pregnant wife, Kate, who is officially on maternity leave awaiting the birth of their third child and due "any minute now," according to Prince William. It is royal protocol for the most senior member of the Royal Family—the Queen—to arrive last, but the couple were reportedly stuck in traffic. As always, the duchess was glowing, this time in a brown Catherine Walker coat and Lock & Co. hat.

Prince Harry and Meghan were absent, having previous private plans that weekend. Although Prince Charles wasn't seen publicly, he did deliver his first televised Easter message on Good Friday, focusing on the plight of persecuted Christians around the world. H
